NAMED ONE OF THE TOP 30 I-O PSYCHOLOGISTS

Named one of the top 30 I-O Psychologists alive today, Dr. McKenna is passionate about developing leaders and about transforming the way we see the people in our organizations. As he will tell you, we have the tools at our fingertips to invest in our people in ways that are meaningful to them and will get the results we need. Thirty years of research has taught us much how people learn and grow on the job. We have what it takes to create rich learning environments for the people we lead, and all we have to do is begin to act on what we know.

Dr. McKenna brings a combination of approachability, authenticity, expert knowledge, and humor to his talks. Whether you are interested in character development, dealing with conflict, creating engaging learning cultures, or developing the next generation of leaders, his approach of getting real about what's going on in your life and work brings people alongside him in a way that inspires change. The models he uses in his talks are based on decades of research on leadership, team functioning, organizational health, and individual development.

WHOLE + INTENTIONAL LEADER DEVELOPMENT

Based on over four decades of research and centuries old wisdom on the developmental journey of leaders, Dr. McKenna highlights the countercultural and wild paradigm of whole and intentional leader development – seeing leaders as whole people, never shying away from the mistakes that create opportunities to learn, and intentionally crossing the superficial boundaries between our work as leaders in our families, workplaces, and communities. Emerging leaders expect us to see them more quickly, and current leaders are begging for someone to help them invest in other leaders, understand their strengths and weaknesses, and move forward with intention and care.

Based on his research and experience working with thousands of leaders (current and emerging) across dozens of contexts and cultures, Dr. McKenna focuses in on the concept of what it means to bring our whole selves to our work, to invest in other people around us, and to get intentional about our learning and growth.

This talk can be packaged with a sampling of the tools in the WILD Toolkit. Learn more about the WILD Toolkit at www.wildleaders.org/the-wild-toolkit

THE AUDIENCE WILL LEAVE WITH:

- An awareness of what it means to move toward being more whole and less fragmented as leaders and people in organizations.
- A recognition of how our personality, calling, purpose, character, and support networks work together to offer us a more complete picture of who we are and how we are showing up.
- Actionable steps for getting intentional about becoming better versions of themselves that do not oversimplify it into a formula for success.

LEADING UNDER PRESSURE

One of the most important elements of great leadership is being able to be composed under pressure. Based on decades of research and content described in his book “Composed: The Heart & Science of Leading Under Pressure,” Dr. Rob McKenna highlights the secret to leading under pressure and the specific strategies you can use to be a better version of yourself when it matters most. This interactive session is a roadmap for standing firmly in who we are while staying connected to those who matter most to us – especially when high-pressure moments come. None of us are immune to the possibility of losing it when the pressure is on.

This talk can be packaged with the Leading Under Pressure tool in the WILD Toolkit. Learn more about the WILD Toolkit at www.wildleaders.org/the-wild-toolkit

THE AUDIENCE WILL LEAVE WITH:

- An increased capacity to recognize the high pressure moments when they come and your tendencies and habits in those moments.
- A recognition of your greatest strengths under pressure and specific strategies that will help you become a better leader in those moments, for your sake and for the sake of others around you.
- A roadmap for implementing a system for repeatable leader development.
